Francophone Mennonites hold consultation on theological education

Kinshasa, DR Congo – The Francophone Mennonite Network, working under the auspices of Mennonite World Conference, attempts to foster relationships and projects among French-speaking Mennonites from three continents. The first consultation on theological education among francophone Mennonites was held at the Centre Universitaire de Missiologie in Kinshasa, 26-28 February. Forty-five participants came from nine different countries.

The consultation had a number of components. First, participants were invited to get to know one another and their respective contexts in relation to theological education.

Second, the consultation featured three presentations on various topics: theological education in Congo, theological education and Muslim-Christian relations and theological education and Mennonite-Anabaptist identity throughout history.

Third, in response to the consultation discussions, a continuation committee and four working groups were put into place to explore different avenues of collaboration.

Informal conversations within the network have often focused on the importance of theological education in relation to Mennonite identity. However, no French-language Mennonite theological school currently offers the possibility of a seminary degree, and therefore many pastors, preachers and elders are trained in interdenominational Evangelical institutions.

Catholic and Mennonites collaborate on church building restoration

Kitchener, Ontario, Canada – In Ukraine a former Mennonite church building is being restored and transformed – with the help of Canadian Mennonites – into a Greek Catholic church.

This development, according to observers, is an example of Mennonite-Catholic collaboration in the spirit of other exchanges over the past decade or so.

The Mennonite church in the former village of Schoensee (now Snegurovka) was originally built in 1909. During the post-October 1917 revolution Soviet era, when Mennonites were forced to leave, the church building was used for storage and then fell into disrepair.

Recently the Greek Catholic Church in Ukraine secured ownership of the building and a retired Catholic priest from the Czech Republic, Father Peter Trenzky, is giving leadership to the restoration as well as to the congregation, which has started to worship in the building.

In learning about the restoration project, individuals associated with the Mennonite Centre in nearby Molochansk (formerlly Halbstad) offered to help. The Centre was established in 2001 in the former Mennonite Girls’ School (Maedcherschule) to provide a range of community services.

According to Darrin Snyder Belousek, the renovation of the former Schoensee church “is the fruit of the renewal of the Catholic Church in Ukraine.” Snyder Belousek is executive director of Bridgefolk, a North American-based movement of Mennonites and Catholics with an annual gathering to learn from each other’s traditions.

He further pointed out “a parallel of sorts” between the experience of Ukrainian Catholics and that of Russian Mennonites. The former lost their churches, had no legal protection and survived as an underground church during the Soviet era. Russian Mennonites also were not officially recognized by the Soviets and assimilated with the Baptists. “Both churches faced repression under similar circumstances from the same oppressor,” commented Snyder Belousek, “and had to make costly choices to keep faithful.”

Bridgefolk was formed shortly after the start of the 1998-2003 International Mennonite-Catholic Ecumenical Dialogue organized by Mennonite World Conference and the Vatican’s Pontifical Council for Promoting Christian Unity.

New Anabaptist conference emerges in South Korea

Seoul, South Korea – A new conference of Anabaptist congregations has emerged in South Korea.

The Korea Anabaptist Fellowship (KAF), formed in 2010, became an official conference of eight congregations and an associate member church of Mennonite World Conference earlier this year. The decision was finalized at the fellowship’s May 2014 meeting, held at the Peace and Joy Church in Nonsan, South Korea. At that meeting, Namshik Chon and Sang-Uk Nham were elected as the president and the contact person for the new conference, respectively.

According to Nham, the formation of this new conference follows several years of church growth among South Korean Anabaptists. The oldest Anabaptist community in South Korea, Jesus Village Church, began in 1996. Since then, it has planted three new congregations. At the same time, numerous South Korean pastors and seminary students discovered Anabaptism through their studies and through books published by Korea Anabaptist Center and Daegang-gan Publishing Co., two initiatives of South Korean Anabaptists, and as a result established churches in the country. More recently, in 2013, two Anabaptist congregations took root through church planting partnerships with the Pacific Southwest Conference of Mennonite Church USA.

Amid this growing interest in Anabaptism, reports Nham, KAF was founded “to promote Anabaptist church planting in Korea [and] to help and facilitate the practice of Anabaptist perspectives in members’ Christian faith.”

The growth of the fellowship ultimately led to its establishment as a conference.

“Forming a conference is a small step,” adds Nham. “But this step will lead us a higher stage, where we can work together with many churches interested in Anabaptism, and where we can promote new church planting and mutual caring among members with a proper level of protection and accountability. In this stage, we will be a light of hope, full of joy, to minister to others.”

Burkina Faso church experiences ‘explosion of baptisms’

Elkhart, Indiana, USA / Burkina Faso – Recent baptisms have swelled the membership of Eglise Evangélique Mennonite du Burkina Faso (Evangelical Mennonite Church of Burkina Faso) by 34 percent, according to recent reports by Mennonite Mission Network and Siaka Traoré, national president of the Burkina Faso church.

“I cannot explain [this wave of interest, other than to say] that I believe God wants to grow the church,” Traoré said.

In July 2013, the church reported a membership of 420. By the end of April 2014, the total membership was 563. Of the new members, 44 were baptized in the weeks around Christmas. And in the three Sundays surrounding Easter, 63 were baptized in five different congregations. “I’m blown away by this explosion of baptisms,”

“What do you love about MWC?”

MWC staffers describe their favourite things about our global fellowship.

Lynn Roth
North American Representative
Harrisonburg, Virginia, USA

“MWC provides me with the opportunity to learn to be a more faithful disciple of Christ and to appreciate all the gifts of the global Anabaptist church. This happens as I learn about the joys, challenges and faithful responses of my worldwide and North American Anabaptist brothers and sisters.”

Sarah Cain
Administrative Assistant
Kitchener, Ontario, Canada

“I love the way MWC connects people from all over the world and shares their stories. I love hearing about the work being done through the Global Church Sharing Fund and seeing how it helps congregations from all over the world. I love knowing that while our struggles may be different, we all love and worship the same God and are living for him.”

John D. Roth
Secretary, Faith and Life Commission
Goshen, Indiana, USA

“MWC offers a constant reminder that the Body of Christ is truly international. I love the fact that the Anabaptist-Mennonite seed has taken root in cultures far beyond Europe and North America.”

Commissions updates

The four MWC Commissions support and extend the work of our global communion between and beyond the assemblies. The Commissions have been described as the four chambers of one heart, which seeks to link the worldwide community of Anabaptist-related churches for fellowship, worship, service and witness.

In March 2014, the four MWC Commissions met for a rare face-to-face meeting in Schoorl, Netherlands. (Most of their work is done online.) Here are a few short glimpses into their work during those meetings.

Leaders of the MWC Commissions (from left): Richard Showalter (chair, Mission), Alfred Neufeld (chair, Faith and Life), Paulus Widjaja (chair, Peace), Rafael Zaracho (secretary, Mission), John Roth (secretary, Faith and Life), Robert J. Suderman (secretary, Peace), Henk Stenvers (secretary, Deacons) and Cynthia Peacock (chair, Deacons)

Mission Commission
The Mission Commission is drafting an Anabaptist theology of mission. The draft will be presented to the Global Anabaptist Service Network and Global Mission Fellowship, both of which function under the umbrella of the Mission Commission, for review. Finally, the document will be presented to the MWC General Council for approval and adoption.

Faith and Life Commission
In partnership with the International Community of Mennonite Brethren (ICOMB) and the Mennonite Education Agency of Mennonite Church USA, the Faith and Life Commission is planning to convene a “Global Educators Conference” at the 2015 Assembly in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, USA.

Additionally, in its ecumenical involvements, the commission is exploring ways to promote the results of the MWC dialogue with Seventh-day Adventists in local congregations.

Deacons Commission
The Deacons Commission re-affirmed the regular rotation of Koinonia delegations to Latin America, Africa and Asia, respectively. This plan had been affirmed at an earlier meeting, but its implementation has been delayed by logistical problems and more pressing visits. The commission hopes to put this rotation into place after making decisions about the size of delegations and the financing of visits.

Peace Commission
The Peace Commission continues to work on its web-based “Guidelines for Determining MWC Response to Internal Conflicts of Member Churches.” One resource already in place is “Guidelines for Involvement in Member-Church Conflict,” available online (www.mwc-cmm.org) in English, Spanish and French. The commission is currently revising “Reconciling Our Perspectives, Restoring Our Relationships: Dialogue and Understanding Within Mennonite World Conference,” which provides guidelines for dealing with interpersonal and inter-group conflict within the MWC community.

Fellowship and dialogue shape MWC

Executive Committee meeting

Soacha, Colombia – Tears flowed freely as a Mennonite World Conference delegation of international visitors exchanged stories and blessings with members of Iglesia Menonita de la resurrección (Mennonite Church of the Resurrection) in Soacha, Colombia on 18 May 2014.

The delegation, with persons from around 18 countries, was en route to Bogotá from a Catholic retreat centre in Fusagasugá, where they had met for five days. The meetings included the Executive Committee, the YABs (Young Anabaptists) Committee, a representative from each commission and some MWC staff.

Members of the Soacha congregation shared stories about their ministry with persons displaced by violence in their communities. They sang, they danced. They shared food with the delegation in their street-level facility called Comedor pan y vida (literally, dining room or cafeteria for bread and life).

They extended their hands in blessing to the international visitors who responded with their own stories that resonated with those they had heard. “Thank you so much for coming,” exclaimed Adaia Bernal, leader of the Soacha congregation. “Don’t lose contact with the umbilical cord to the base communities that make up the church.”

Networking challenge

The ongoing challenge of helping to connect Anabaptist-related communities around the world was high on the agenda during the Executive Committee meeting. To increase its own capacity to build relationships globally, the committee began its meetings with a training session on intercultural competence.

On Sunday 18 May 2014 the Mennonite and Brethren in Christ congregations in Bogotá met for a joint worship service. On behalf of these churches, Peter Stucky (right) and Diego Martinez Muñoz (left) presented colourful hammocks as a gift to MWC President Danisa Ndlovu (second from right) and President-Elect Nelson Kraybill. The committee accepted into MWC membership two national churches, the Brethren in Christ Church in South Africa and the Arbeitsgemeinschaft Mennonitische Brüdergemeinden in Deutschland (Association of Mennonite Brethren Churches in Germany).

Upon affirmation of this decision by the MWC General Council, the total MWC membership will be 103 national churches in 57 countries with about 1.3 million baptized members.

Prayers

• Pray for Sang-Min Lee (pictured above), the first Mennonite conscientious objector (CO) in South Korea. He was recently sentenced to 18 months in prison for refusing, on the basis on his faith, to complete his mandatory military service. Pray for peace and joy for Sang-Min and for his parents. His parents are Christians, but didn’t agree with his stance on the peace position, and thus rejected this action by their son. Pray also for the Anabaptist churches in South Korea, which are few, but should come together with a unified voice on peace issues. Most Christians are very quiet on the CO issue because it requires political action that usually leads to conflict and division. We need much courage to step out of our comfort zone, to a faithful life that is risky but leads to abundant life in Christ.

News Briefs

said Rod Hollinger-Janzen, executive coordinator of Africa Inter-Mennonite Mission, which works with the Evangelical Mennonite Church of Burkina Faso through a multi-member partnership council. “I feel great joy because these baptisms testify to the faithfulness of Mennonites in Burkina Faso, who, day after day, act with kindness toward their neighbors and bear witness in a compelling way, so that people say, ‘I want what they have.’”

According to Burkina Faso’s most recent government census (2006), more than 60 percent of the population practices Islam. Only four percent belong to a Protestant denomination.

In a context where Muslims make up the majority of the population, the decision to be baptized is not to be taken lightly, as it may result in derision and even persecution. Traoré said that he rejoices when people count the cost and still want to be baptized into the Mennonite Church.

Preparation for baptism usually takes place over a three-month period and includes basic Bible knowledge; an understanding of church life; and instruction in evangelism, ethics, practical aspects of Christian living and Mennonite history. The church is in the process of standardizing a curriculum for baptismal candidates.
